I. INTRODUCTION

On July 7, 2006, H 7025 Substitute A became effective. This legislation amended Chapter 40-8.4 – Health Care for Families – by adding Section 40-8.4-18 that stipulated:

“Public health access beneficiary employer report. – The department of human services shall annually prepare a public health access beneficiary employer report. A “public health access program beneficiary” means any person who receives medical benefits from RItE Care, RItE Share, or Medicaid. Any applicant for public health benefits through RItE Care, RItE Share, and/or Medicaid shall identify the employer or the employers of the proposed beneficiary of the health care benefits. The report shall provide the following information for each employer of two hundred fifty (250) or more public health access beneficiaries:

- (1) The name and address of the employer;
- (2) The number of public health access program beneficiaries who are employees of the employer;
- (3) The number of public health access program beneficiaries who are spouses or dependents of employees of the employer;
- (4) Whether the employer offers health benefits to its employees;
- (5) Whether the employer participates in the RItE Share program; and
- (6) The cost to the state of Rhode Island for providing public health access benefits to their employees and enrolled dependents.

In determining whether the two hundred fifty (250) employee threshold is met, the department of human services shall include all public health access program beneficiaries employed by the employer and their subsidiaries throughout the state. The report shall not include the names of any individual public health access program beneficiaries and shall be subject to privacy standards pursuant to Public Law 104-91, and the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996. The report shall be submitted annually on the third Tuesday in January to the joint committee on health care oversight, the house finance committee, and the senate finance committee.”

Section 40-8.4-18 was amended in 2007 to require the reporting on employers with fifty (50) or more public health access beneficiaries.

This document is the required report, which is organized as follows:

- Employers Meeting the Reporting Requirement
- Number of Public Health Access Beneficiaries
- Estimated cost to the State of Rhode Island for Providing Public Health Access Benefits

The information in this report should be viewed within the context of employer-sponsored insurance (ESI) in the State. The Office of Health Insurance Commissioner released the *2005 Rhode Island Employer Survey Report*¹ on October 24, 2006. That report provides a very important context for this report to the Joint Committee on Health Care Oversight, House Finance Committee, and Senate Finance Committee. Salient findings from the survey report on Rhode Island employers are as follows:

- The percent of employers offering employer-sponsored insurance (ESI) has declined. In 1999, 79 percent of employers offered ESI while only 74 percent did in 2005.
- Larger employers were more likely to offer ESI than smaller employers. In 2005, 98 percent of employers with 50 or more employees offered ESI, whereas only 86 percent of employers with 10 to 49 employees did and only 65 percent of employers with 3 to 9 employees did.
- Lower-wage employers² were less likely to offer ESI. In 2005, only 48 percent of low-wage employers offered ESI to full-time employees compared to 89 percent for other employers.
- The percent of employers offering ESI to part-time employees³ has declined. In 1999, 32 percent of employers offered ESI to part-time employees while only 14 percent did in 2005.
- Low-wage employers hire more part-time workers than other employers. In 2005, 48 percent of low-wage employers' workforces were part-time employees while it was 14 percent for other employers.
- The percentage of employers paying full premium for individual and family coverage has declined. In 1999, 61 percent of employers paid the full premium for individual coverage and 43 percent did for family coverage. In 2005, these percentages declined to 38 percent and 26 percent, respectively.

² This was defined in the survey as "companies where over 50% of employees are paid annual wages less than $21,000."

³ Eligibility for ESI among part-time employees is generally determined by the number of hours worked per week.

- The number of ESI choices offered to employees has declined. In 1999, 38 percent of employers offered a choice of two or more carriers while in 2005 only three percent did.
- In 2005, seven percent of companies that offered coverage had employees enrolled in RItE Care and two percent had employees enrolled in RItE Share. The survey report noted in this regard: "Moreover, employees working in low-wage industries are more likely to qualify for RItE Care or RItE Share."⁴

In his summary of the employer survey, Rhode Island Health Insurance Commissioner Christopher F. Koller noted:⁵

"Faced with annual double digit premium increases, small employers are being forced to decide between increasing cost sharing with employees, dropping health benefits altogether, or taking a hit to core business performance. Employees are forced to decide between the risks of going uninsured or sharing in the rising costs."

II. EMPLOYERS MEETING THE REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

This chapter shows the employers for which Rhode Island Department of Human Services (DHS) information⁶ indicate that, as of December 2007, there were at least 50 “public health access beneficiaries” including both employees and dependents as defined by Section 40-8.4-18. These employers, whether or not they offer health insurance and have a RItE Share qualified plan, the State’s premium assistance program for low-income individuals created as a result of Health Reform Rhode Island 2000, are shown in Table 1.

It is important to note that even if an employer offers health insurance, coverage benefits vary significantly and may be only available at open enrollment. Some employers offer catastrophic-only coverage or Health Savings Accounts. In particular, temporary agencies may offer health insurance on a “week-to-week” basis.

Table 1
Rhode Island Employers that Had at Least 50 Public Health Access Beneficiaries as of December 2007

⁹ Applicants and recipients provide information about their employers to DHS at time of application, recertification or when there is a change in employment status. It is the recipients' legal responsibility to keep DHS informed if there is a change in employment or other family circumstances.

¹⁰ Persons receiving Extended Family Planning benefits (EFP) have been excluded from the table because they receive a limited benefit package that is not comparable to commercial insurance.

E = Employees

D = Dependents

T = Total

In reviewing Table 2, it is important to keep in mind that employees may not be eligible for health benefits depending on their category of employment.

- As noted in Chapter I, only a small percentage of employers in Rhode Island offer ESI to part-time employees.
- Temporary workers may have access to limited health insurance benefits (e.g. catastrophic only coverage). When it is available, it is often only available on a “week-to-week” basis. Seventeen percent (17%) of these public health beneficiaries are not eligible for RIte Share because they work for temporary agencies. Employment 2000, Qualified Resources, and Workers Mania are, for example, all “temp agencies”.
- In addition to whether or not insurance is offered to different categories of employees, actual enrollment in ESI may be limited (referred to as “take-up”) because of such employment rules such as a lengthy waiting period from time of employment until one can enroll (e.g., six months from the date of employment), enrollment being limited to an “open enrollment period” or an ESI plan with a restricted network provider.
- Employers have also shifted a larger percentage of the cost of ESI to the employees through premiums, deductibles, coinsurance and copays, which impacts “take-up” rates.
- A small number of individuals in the RIte Care column are enrolled in the Family Independence Program (FIP). Persons enrolled in FIP with access to employer-sponsored insurance may be eligible for RIte Share after a six-month period of continuous employment.

IV. ESTIMATED COST TO THE STATE OF RHODE ISLAND FOR PROVIDING PUBLIC HEALTH ACCESS BENEFITS

This chapter presents the estimated cost to the State of Rhode Island in State Fiscal Year (SFY) 2007 for providing public health access benefits to the employees or dependents of the employers shown in Chapter II. For this report, the estimated cost has been determined as follows:

The estimated cost was determined as follows:

1. Individuals who were enrolled as of December 2007 were assumed to have been enrolled in RItE Care for the full calendar year.
2. RItE Care costs include monthly capitation, SOBRA (maternity) and NICU (neonatal intensive care unit) costs.
3. RItE Share costs include monthly premium subsidies, supplementary benefits paid and administrative expenses.
4. Fee-for-Service Medicaid population includes weighted average costs for disabled adults living in the community and children with special health care needs, including foster care children. Fee-for-Service Medicaid costs include in-plan benefits, as defined by the RItE Care "in plan" covered benefits.

Table 3 shows the estimated cost to the State of Rhode Island in SFY 2007 for providing public health access benefits to the employees or dependents for the employers shown in Chapter II.

Table 3

Estimated Cost to the State of Rhode Island of Providing Public Health Access Benefits for SFY 2007, by Employer and DHS Program

	RItE Care	RItE Share		Other Medicaid	Total Actual Costs	State Share of Actual Costs ¹¹
		Actual Costs with RItE Share	Estimated Costs if no RItE Share
Total	$ 85,541,969	$ 5,998,650	$ 12,112,931	$ 7,809,550	$99,350,169	$47,181,395

¹¹ The State share of the costs is 47.49 percent, calculated as 100 percent minus the Federal Medical Assistance Percentage (FMAP) for Medicaid in Federal Fiscal Year (FFY) 2008 of 52.51 percent.

Given the insurance trends discussed in the first chapter of this report, employment does not assure access to ESI nor can lower-wage workers necessarily afford ESI if it is available. The Rhode Island General Assembly enacted programs, like RItE Care and RItE Share to provide access to health care coverage to children and families and to maximize enrollment in ESI, when it is available.

RItE Share is shown in two columns in Table 3. The first RItE Share column is the actual costs to the State for the 3,917 persons in RItE Share of the employers named in this report (see Table 2). The second RItE Share column shows the estimated costs if these 3,917 persons did not have access to ESI and were enrolled in RItE Care, rather than RItE Share. The State saves more than $1million for every one thousand people enrolled in RItE Share.

It should also be noted that these estimated costs maybe overstated for the following reasons:

- First, it is assumed that all of the employees and dependents of employees of the subject employers enrolled in Medicaid as of December 2007 were enrolled in Medicaid for the entire year. This is very unlikely because Medicaid enrollees often experience gaps in Medicaid enrollment. It has been shown that 24 percent of RItE Care enrollees had at least one gap in enrollment.¹² For these individuals, 50 percent had a gap in RItE Care enrollment of at least 30 days. No adjustment was made for this.
- Second, no adjustments were made for individuals who may be obligated to pay a monthly premium share because their incomes exceed 150 percent of the Federal poverty level (FPL). In 2007, nearly 14,000 persons paid approximately $4 million in premium contributions for RItE Care or RItE Share. This report does not link those families who paid premiums with the employees or dependents listed in this report.
- Third, it was assumed that the individuals designated as "Other Medicaid" are adults with disabilities living in the community or children with special health care needs. The Ticket-to-Work program provides opportunities for the working disabled to receive Medical Assistance.

V. IMPORTANT CONSIDERATIONS AND IMPLICATIONS

- This year's report includes significantly more employers than last year's report as a result of the change in statute that lowered the reporting threshold from 250 to 50 or more "public health beneficiaries".
- Employers in this report are listed by Federal Employer Identification Number (FEIN). Only employers with 50 or more public health beneficiaries as listed under an FEIN are included in this report. Some employers may have more than one FEIN number.
- Although many employers do cooperate, employers are not legally required to provide information on their health plan benefits and qualification criteria to the Rhode Island Department of Human Services.
- There are many reasons why employers with RIte Share qualified plans may have some employees enrolled in RIte Care instead of RIte Share:
 - They may not qualify for health insurance benefits if they work part-time, temporary or seasonal jobs or are in a "waiting period" or probationary period.
 - Some employers may offer health insurance to some employees but not to others.
 - Some employers may offer different plan design and/or cost-sharing options to different groups of employees.
